CARPETCHAGGER AVIATION MUSEUM

Housed in the original Group Operations Building on the site of USAAF Station 179, the CARPETCHAGGER AVIATION MUSEUM offers a rare look at life on the top secret base of the 801st / 492nd American Eighth Air Force Bomb Group during World War II

Photographs, maps, exhibits and unique film footage describe the secret missions flown by Harrington airmen dropping agents, weapons and supplies to resistance groups throughout Occupied Europe

Other displays show the vast secret agent and supply network masterminded by the British Special Operations Executive (SOE) and operated from RAF Tempsford. The part played by the Thor missile base at RAF Harrington (1959-1963) during the Cold War period is also fully described

Welbike folding motorcycle used by parachutists during World War 2 on display in the museum

British Mosquito in American markings at Harrington in early 1945. These were used in the Red Stocking / Joan-Eleanor missions that were carried out from Harrington

Nancy Wake. The first female agent to be flown from Harrington in April 1944

The last Thor missile leaving RAF Harrington in 1963. Thor missiles were the first British nuclear deterrent and were based at Harrington with the 218 (SM) Squadron from 1959—1963
